GREETINGS

The Argus extends greetings to its many readers, well-wishers and the public generally, our this occasion, the Christman, which means so much to mankind.

It is the spirit of the occasion that means so much to us all, the apirit of service. Ifaquily, this trowning event comes at the emb of they are a few kear, and the spirit of the occasion that the spirit of the occasion should not be a material way. But the spirit of the occasion should much be best upon what we have received, but subre what we have given. The coming of the Christ into the world was a gift to mankind. There to the control of the occasion, must be those who contribute most toward helping to make, this old world better.

As we parfind the ceasure genting means to ward helping to make, this old world better.

As we parfind the cassure genting are as a very constant of the christ manking the past to the spirit of the execution of the populativity has been one; to save we work was a constant of the production of the past to which a stronger than product.

The saving of the Christ way when the product of the three saving of the past to when any then, we are more than product of the Christ whose being any then, we are more than product of the Christ whose being well were well as a thought that will benefit any then, we are more than product of the Christ whose being well we conclude the cassing the past to when the cassing the past to when the cassing the past to the christ way to be the past to be the pa
